a specter lurks in the house of music and it goes by the name of race write ronald radano and philip bohlman in their introduction yet the intimate relationship between race and music has rarely been examined by contemporary scholars most of whom have abandoned it for the more enlightened notions of ethnicity and culture here a distinguished group of contributors confront the issue head on representing an unusually broad range of academic disciplines and geographic regions they critically examine how the imagination of race has influenced musical production reception and scholarly analysis even as they reject the objectivity of the concept itself each essay follows the lead of the substantial introduction which reviews the history of race in european and american non western and global musics placing it within the contexts of the colonial experience and the more recent formation of world music offering a bold new revisionist agenda for musicology in a postmodern postcolonial world this book will appeal to students of culture and race across the humanities and social sciences

frank fearless letters from poets of all colors genders classes about the material conditions under which their art is made perhaps wrote ralph ellison more than seventy years ago the zoot suit contains profound political meaning perhaps the symmetrical frenzy of the lindy hop conceals clues to great potential power as ellison noted then many of our most mundane cultural forms are larger and more important than they appear taking on great significance and an unexpected depth of meaning what he saw in the power of the lindy hop the dance that life magazine once billed as america s true national folk dance would spread from black america to make a lasting impression on white america and offer us a truly compelling means of understanding our culture but with what hidden implications in american allegory black hawk hancock offers an embedded and embodied ethnography that situates dance within a larger chicago landscape of segregated social practices delving into two chicago dance worlds the lindy and steppin hancock uses a combination of participant observation and interviews to bring to the surface the racial tension that surrounds white use of black cultural forms focusing on new forms of appropriation in an era of multiculturalism hancock underscores the institutionalization of racial disparities and offers wonderful insights into the intersection of race and culture in america human beings tend to romanticize history or idealize historical figures this is nowhere more apparent than the civil rights era of the twentieth century the problem is that when we idealize history we fail to learn from it the result is that history repeats itself along with its sins and atrocities the january 6 capitol insurrection and the current racial reckoning we are experiencing is unoriginal to the american experience we have been here before this book seeks to humanize people we have idealized readers are invited to challenge racial hatred and injustice in their own context by looking to the lives of historical figures who have faced the challenges we currently face by examining the self care practices of personalities like ida b wells fannie lou hamer benjamin elijah mays and martin luther king jr this book examines the practices of introspection and self work these historical figures engaged in that enabled them to fulfill the body of work they are celebrated for today by humanizing these historical titans we can emulate similar practices of self care and introspection in our own lives that can equip us in continuing the ongoing work of dismantling structures of racial hatred and oppression and promoting freedom love equity and justice to redeem the soul of a nation when jimmi hendrix died the idea of a black man playing lead guitar in a rock band seemed exotic yet ten years earlier chuck berry had stood among the most influential rock and roll performers why did rock and roll become white jack hamilton challenges the racial categories that distort standard histories of rock music and the 60s revolution jesus is calling his church to be a multiethnic and missional people who listen and learn from the many voices of world christianity graham joseph hill issues a moving call for churches to be missional by being conformed to the image of jesus christ hill does this by exploring the thinking of twenty five asian african latin american indigenous african american diaspora caribbean oceanian eastern european and middle eastern pastors and theologians these are as diverse as melba padilla maggay emmanuel katongole lamin sanneh oscar muriu ruth padilla deborst pope francis richard twiss lisa sharon harper willie james jennings ada maria isasi diaz soong chan rah and mitri raheb these voices show us the future of missional churches in world christianity when churches are conformed to christ they make disciples heal a broken world and witness to jesus and his gospel jesus forms us in his image and moves us to be a people of shalom humility character justice peace wisdom prayer beauty and witness the church has had a reformation but now it needs a conformation hill explores biblical themes and the voices of world christianity to show that a missional church is conformed to the image of the incarnate crucified resurrected and glorified christ conformity to christ is the heart of missional ecclesiology and discipleship masks is an archaeology of the racial imagination exploring the work of both black and white artists and writers it shows how the racist belief in innate intellectual and moral difference developed from the classificatory sciences of the enlightenment it also questions the more opaque racism of integration where professed ideas of equal so often mean like us lively places these two tendencies against an existential definition of blackness which has come mostly from black writers themselves in his penetrating study adam lively looks closely at eighteenth century novels jazz and rap propagandist verse the trickster tales of slaves and their autobiographical narratives the science of darwin and fictions of blood and empire examining the harlem renaissance in the 1920s the black arts movement of the 1960s and the effects of black feminism he argues that only by understanding the complex evolution of present attitudes can we understand the impact of race on our imaginations and on our lives
